icosahedron as follows. We take three golden rectangles in the three coordinate planes as shown in Figure 7. If the golden rectangles have sides of length 2 and 2f, these vertices are (1;0; f);(0; f; 1) and (f; 1;0). Connecting each vertex with with its closest neighbors produces the edges of the 20 equilateral triangular faces.

The Golden Property ($\hat{\phi} = \frac{1 + \sqrt{5}}{2} \approx 1.618$) is the only positive number with the property that when you add one to the number you get the square of the number, that is, $\hat{\phi}^2 = \hat{\phi} + 1$. We will call this property the golden property. As we will soon see, the golden property has really important algebraic and geometric implications.
